The revenue necessary by direct taxation, and every citizen should be levied with a tax in proportion to what he is worth. This would lead to economy in the administration of government. The history of all governments having high tariffs shows them to be extravagant and licentious. The collecting revenue from a duty on foreign importation is like charging a man for the privilege of buying a commodity from him. For illustration: A has a thousand bushels of wheat to sell to the miller, he sells the wheat at the market price, and pays him a fee for buying it. That is; A sells his wheat at a dollar per bushel, and when he collects the money the and when he collects the money the miller deducts from the price twenty cents per bushel for having bought the wheat. But the miller does not get the wheat at eighty cents, and thus sell his flour to the consumer at the rate of flour made from eighty cent wheat; because the twenty cents he pays to B, who is a poor farmer, or has poor land, and cannot compete with A in making wheat, to enable him to live by the sale of 800 bushels, thus creating a forced competition be-tween A and B which is not just or FREE TRADER.
